ARTISTS

Born in Brussels in 1959, Michèle Anne De Mey (creator) studied at Mudra, Maurice Béjart's dance school from 1976–1979. Her early works include Passé Simple (1981), Ballatum duets (1984), and Face à Face (1986). She collaborated with Anne Teresa de Keersmaecker in the famous Fase (1982), Rosas danst Rosas (1983), and Elena's Aria (1986). In 1989, she founded the company Astragale, to be able to create, produce, and distribute choreographic works around the world. In 1990, she created Sinfonia Eroïca, a major piece in her career, which received numerous awards and international success. Thanks to that piece, Astragale became a production center where residencies, workshops, and creations happen. More than 30 original works have been generated by Astragale, where several young artists have had the opportunity to think, share, and work.

Over 15 years, Ms. De Mey has developed a polymorphic dance universe taking its roots in the special space between the dancer and the audience. Intimacy, storytelling, emotion, and deconstruction are at the basis of her choreographic research. The strong and unbreakable link between music and body pushed her to collaborate with music composers Thierry De Mey, Robert Wyatt, and Jonathan Harvey, and eventually cinema directors, painters, actors, and circus artists to stretch beyond the lines of genres and disciplines.

As a teacher, she has developed workshops and taught courses in Brussels, Angers, and Amsterdam that have shaped her students as much as her personal journey as an artist. She was pronounced Doctor Honoris Causa by the University of Mons in Belgium in 2014 and Officier of the Ordre des Arts et des Lettres by the French minister of culture in 2016.

In 2005, she became the artistic co-director of Charleroi Danses, the choreographic center of the French-speaking part of Belgium. To celebrate this new chapter, she recreated her central piece, Sinfonia Eroïca, for nine young dancers, and toured it around the world for several years. In 2011, with her life partner and filmmaker Jaco Van Dormael, she began working on a collective piece entitled Kiss & Cry, a huge success that has since toured on all continents in nine different languages. The story of Kiss & Cry and its collective of creators continued in 2015 where a second opus was born: Cold Blood. With the same science of balance between genre and disciplines, Ms. De Mey and her collaborators tell a new story that touches audiences profoundly. In 2017, Jaco Van Dormael and Ms. De Mey will present a new original collaboration, Amor, a solo piece where cinema and dance meet lovingly in dreamy and metaphysical ways.

After his studies in Paris and Brussels, Jaco Van Dormael (creator) began his career in the early 1980s with short films and documentaries. Among them, E Pericoloso Sporgersi was well-received and won the Grand Prix at the film Festival of Clermont Ferrand.

Mr. Van Dormael's first full-length film, Toto le Héros, displays his dreamlike style between humor and innocence. The film won the Camera d'Or at the Cannes Festival and the award of "Best Foreign Film" at the French César Awards. Six years later, Mr. Van Dormael presented his new piece in Cannes entitled The Eighth Day. The film is a touching story of friendship between two men, one living with Down syndrome.

The two leading roles won “Best Actors” in Cannes and the film was a huge success in Europe.

Mr. Nobody followed, a co-production between Canada, the US, Belgium, and France, and included Mr. Van Dormael’s favorite themes: childhood, innocence, destiny, and science fiction. The film starred Jared Leto and Diane Kruger and was released in 2010 after being presented at the Festival of Venice in 2009.

Soon after, Mr. Van Dormael returned to the stage, his first love. In 2011, with his life partner and dancer Michèle Anne De Mey, he developed Kiss & Cry: a collective adventure with 10 creators that straddles dance, theater, and cinema. In 2012, the Royal Opera of Wallonia asked him to direct César Franck’s Stradella for its reopening. In 2016, he directed Mozart’s Don Giovanni.

In 2015, Mr. Van Dormael returned to the screen with The Brand New Testament. He directed the famous Belgian actor Benoît Poelvoorde and the French icon Catherine Deneuve. The film was presented in Cannes during the Quinzaine des réalisateurs, and won four Magrittes (Belgian Academy Awards) including awards for “Best Movie” and “Best Director.”
